

CultureGrrl

Lee Rosenbaum's cultural commentary

HOME ABOUT CONTACT

 POSTS  COMMENTS

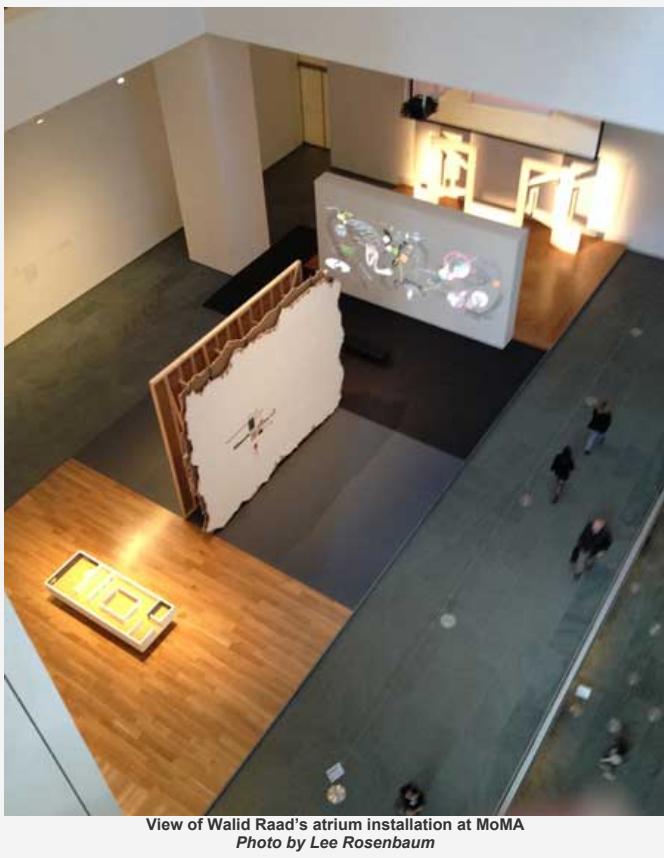

Walid Raad's Blurred Lines at MoMA: Does Truth Matter?

 October 27, 2015 by CultureGrrl

The Museum of Modern Art's bewildering Walid Raad exhibition (to Jan. 31) "investigates distinctions between fact and fiction," according to its press release. In truth, it blurs those distinctions in a ways that sometimes feel more like heavy-handed propaganda than subtle artistry or clever parody.

Raad intentionally distorts political and economic relationships through lens of his slyly subversive sensibility. He has occupied MoMA's cavernous atrium with stage-set components for his four-times-a-week public performance—"Scratching on things I could disavow: Walkthrough."

He would not allow the press to photograph him, but here's a view of his props from higher up:

View of Walid Raad's atrium installation at MoMA
Photo by Lee Rosenbaum

I was interested in hearing what Raad had to say, thanks to his notoriety for having been barred from entering the United Arab Emirates as a result of his high-profile involvement with Gulf Labor Coalition—the artist-initiated activist group that has strongly protested the Guggenheim's plans to open a satellite facility on Saadiyat Island in Abu Dhabi, in light of serious and seemingly intractable workers' rights violations on other major capital projects there.

MoMA's director, Glenn Lowry, had been one of the signatories of a strongly worded letter addressed to the Guggenheim (as well as to other major institutions, including the Louvre and New York University), asking it to "work with the concerned authorities" to lift the UAE's travel prohibitions against Raad and another artist, Ashok Sukumaran. Glenn revealed during a conversation with Raad at the end of the press preview that the two had shared a car ride to Abu Dhabi from Dubai about 10 years ago.

I listened to the beginning of Raad's presentation with journalistic interest, as he exposed the purportedly insidious undercurrents marring a project that I had always regarded as a laudable effort to strengthen the financial security of artists—the Artist Pension Trust. (APT boasts several illustrious artworld figures on its advisory board.)

After initially praising the concept behind APT, Raad, who is Lebanese, maintained that "it could be dangerous for any Arab artist joining this fund, because 'Lebanon and Israel are still in a state

CULTUREGRRL

Photo © by Jill Krementz

CULTUREGRRL (Lee Rosenbaum) is the artworld's award-winning "best blog." I'm a veteran cultural journalist and lecturer with many pieces in the Wall Street Journal, New York Times and major art magazines. I've been a cultural contributor on New York Public Radio (WNYC and WQXR) and provided arts commentary on NPR [Read More ...]

Creative Capital | Warhol Foundation

ARTS WRITERS GRANT PROGRAM

CultureGrrl is supported by a Creative Capital/Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant

SUPPORT CULTUREGRRL

PLEASE SUPPORT THE BLOG Contributions via PayPal:

Donate

Buy My Book:

THE COMPLETE GUIDE TO COLLECTING ART

Autographed Copy

Buy Now

SUBSCRIBE

Option 1 : $5.00 USD - monthly Select Month

Subscribe

ARCHIVES

Archives Select Month

CONNECT WITH ME

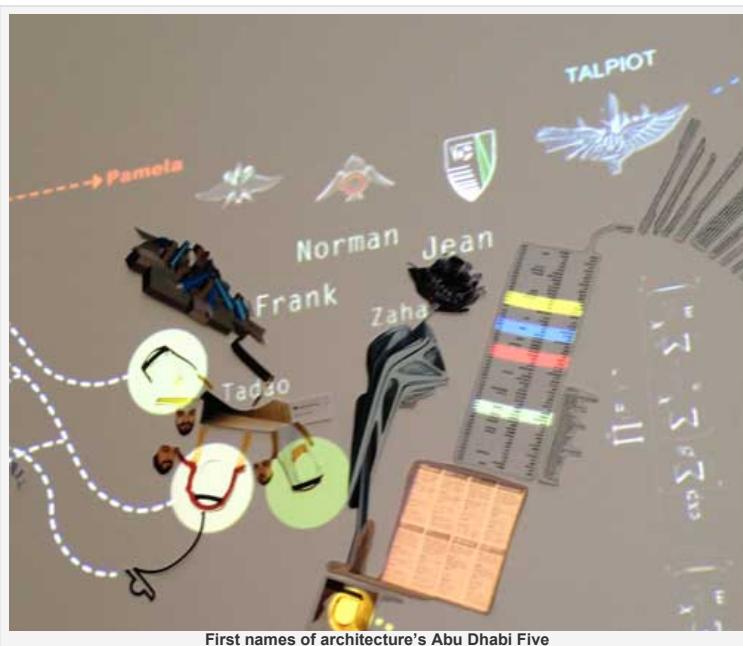

of war." He said his research had revealed that one of APT's founders had served in an "elite military intelligence unit" of the Israeli army.

His visual representation of APT's activities (which at first had reminded me of Hans Haacke's legendary documentation about a New York slumlord) is in the upper left corner of this complex diagram of political and economic artworld interrelationships, projected on a temporary wall erected in MoMA's atrium:

Raad's wall diagram
Photo by Lee Rosenbaum

Also on Raad's screen were references to the architects of the planned museums on Abu Dhabi's Saadiyat Island...

First names of architecture's Abu Dhabi Five
Photo by Lee Rosenbaum

...and NY Times clippings regarding Abu Dhabi-related protests:

@CULTUREGRRL TWEETS

Tweets

Follow

10h

I got more interested in getting myself a @GoPro camera after I saw one in use @WhitneyMuseum's Stella press preview pic.twitter.com/qTdx0IVAyQ

Expand

10h

Tweet to @CultureGrrl

MY WORK ELSEWHERE

MY BOOK

The Complete Guide to Collecting Art \(Knopf\)

MAINSTREAM MEDIA

NY TIMES ARTS & LEISURE

Two Painters: So Alike, So Different (Caravaggio/Hals)

NY TIMES OP-EDS:

For Sale: Our Permanent Collection (museum deaccessions)

Fashion Victim (Chanel at the Met)

Destroying the Museum to Save It (Barnes Foundation)

Reassembling Sundered Antiquities (Parthenon marbles)

WALL STREET JOURNAL:

Review of Renovated Wadsworth Atheneum

Technology in Museum Galleries

Review of the New Whitney

"Senuso" at Cleveland Museum

Broader Meaning of Detroit Institute's Ordeal

MoMA Restores Matisse's "Swimming Pool"

Plan to Dismantle the Corcoran

Clark Art Institute's Expansion

9/11 Memorial Museum

Getty's Jackson Pollock Restoration

Kimbell Art Museum's New Piano Pavilion

A New Art Partnership (Kiefer at MASS MoCA)

Rewriting the History of Abstract Expressionism (Ossorio at Parrish)

Paul Singer Collection at Sackler Gallery

Arkell Museum at Canajoharie

William Matthew Prior at Fenimore

Photo by Lee Rosenbaum

As Raad's performance escalated into increasingly bizarre flights of paranoid fantasy (including a gallery's shrinking of his artworks, the alarming unavailability to artists of certain colors, and telepathic messages from future artists), I felt like a fool for initially believing his earnestly presented "research." Maybe he had intended for us to believe his critique of APT, but by now everything out of his mouth seemed metaphorical at best, hallucinatory at worst.

More "documentation" occurs on the third floor, with photos, video and text bolstering the imaginary research findings of a fictional organization, The Atlas Group, related to strife in Lebanon:

"We are a fair people. We never speak well of one another_IX," 1994/2003
Photo by Lee Rosenbaum

Curator Eva Respini told the press that Raad's work "is about nuances and slippages" and that the question of what's real and what's fiction is "beside the point." I suppose that prioritizing artistic imagination over "reality" is, for better or worse, a time-honored practice (as in the "Steve Jobs" movie, which those who knew him say is more fiction than fact).

But the journalist in me says that truth counts, even in art and art museums, and especially in matters of public interest. If you play fast and loose with your audience, you're likely to subvert your own mission.

Share:

10/27/15 9:12 PM | filed under: Uncategorized |

- Native, North American, New
- Becoming Jackson Pollock
- Artifacts to Artworks
- American Indian Installations
- Morgan Library Renovation
- Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' Expansion
- \(designed by Rick Mather\)
- Crisis in Art Bibliography (Getty and BHA)
- Profile of the Met's Tom Campbell
- Elevating American Indian Art (Nelson-Atkins)
- Landesman Produces Controversy
- New Modern Wing at Art Institute of Chicago
- Michael Conforti Profile
- Making Sales Look Stronger
- Lee Krasner's "Little Image" Paintings
- Ando-Designed Stone Hill Center for Conservation and Clark Exhibitions
- Los Angeles' New Broad Museum of Contemporary Art
- Philadelphia's New Perelman Building
- The Walton Effect: Art World Is Roiled by Walmart Heiress
- Tricks of the Auction Trade
- The Seattle Art Museum: A Work in Progress
- Upside Down and Backward, Yet Tame (Boston ICA)
- Edith Wharton's Library Is Now an Open Book
- Extreme Makeover: Smithsonian Edition
- \(American Art and Portrait Gallery renovation\)
- This Museum's Expansion is Simply Effective (Minneapolis Institute)
- Truth in Booty: Coming—and Staying—Clean (antiquities controversies)
- A Betrayal of Trust (NY Public Library's art sales)
- The Lost Museum (MoMA's art sales)
- Endangered Species (single-collector jewel-box museums)
- Money in Motion (the Guggenheim's finances)
- The Fine Art of Genocide? (appraisals of Hitler's art)
- National Museum of the American Indian
- APOLLO MAGAZINE
- Debate on Satellite Museums
- LA TIMES OP-EDS:
- Make Art Loans, Not War
- Museums Can't Compete (public collecting endangered)
- HUFFINGTON POST:
- My columns for HuffPost Arts
- PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER
- Her Art Came First: Anne d'Harnoncourt's Labor of Love
- ART IN AMERICA:
- [Note: The AiA links, alas, are no longer active.]
- Refreshing the Smithsonian (the renovated SAAM and NPG)
- The Atrium That Ate the Morgan (Renzo Piano's addition)
- Hot Pots and Potshots (controversies over museum antiquities)
- Musings on Museums (book review of "Whose Muse?")
- NPR:
- Detroit Institute of Arts' "Grand Bargain"
- Crystal Bridges controversies
- Crystal Bridges Museum's \$800 Million (from American Public Media)
- Smithsonian's "Hide/Seek" Controversy
- Sotheby's Polaroid auction (at 1:20)